

A Letter of Thanks and Commendation.

Condor, Ga., July 13, 1911.
American National Insurance Co., Galveston, Texas.

Gentlemen:-

Your representatives, Daniels & King, have just handed me your draft No. 19935 for $2000, being settlement in full under Policy No. 12216, issued on the life of my late husband, Robert John Prior, of Condor, Ga., who was instantly killed by being struck by a locomotive. I certainly commend your double indemnity clause most highly, which in my particular case pays me two thousand dollars, while a policy without this attractive feature would only have paid me one thousand dollars. The proofs were mailed you on the 6th, and I thank you again and again for so promptly paying this claim.

Yours truly,
MRS. ALICE PRIOR,
Beneficiary.

Fire Insurance.

I have taken charge of the Insurance business of Boyd Bros., and same will have the prompt and careful attention as heretofore. All policies will be renewed where not advised to the contrary.

Nothing but first class responsible Companies will be represented, so in case of fire you will have what you have paid for--PROTECTION.

Soliciting your business, I am
John M. Garrett,
Elba,
Alabama.

etc., as are also the other members of the Greenville series. The position of this type and level surface accounts for the dark color. The accumulations of organic matter are greater in the small depressions, where the soil is a very dark brown to almost black heavy loam, or clay loam. These areas are naturally very fertile, and give heavy yields of corn and cotton when properly handled. Unless the proper distance is given to cotton, the growth becomes so thick as to shade much of the fruit and it fails to mature. More attention should be given to distancing the cotton to avoid this. Similar conditions prevail throughout the Greenville country said.

Shallow, eroded areas frequently occur about the heads of gullies, spring heads, etc., in which the subsoil is exposed at the surface in spots. These areas were referred to under the Greenville clay loam. Where these areas occur they should either be seeded to Bermuda grass or properly terraced to prevent washing. In the latter case winter cover crops should always be grown to assist in binding the soil. The Greenville sandy loam is probably the best soil type in the country for cultivation with labor-saving machinery. Cultivation should be done as much as possible with 2-horse cultivators, so as to permit the crop to be worked rapidly and often. If the cotton and corn were planted in check rows and cultivated both ways much of the expense and labor of chopping and hoeing could be avoided.

The necessity of deep plowing as well as subsoiling can not be too strongly recommended for this soil. Plowing should not be to the depth desired in one season, but should be an inch or two deeper each time through several successive seasons. Subsoiling should be practiced as often as possible at least once in three years. This renders the soil more open and porous and permits a freer passage of the air and moisture through the soil mass. It also aids in conserving the moisture in that it breaks up any hardpan that may have formed and allows the water to penetrate more deeply into the soil. It further permits the roots of plants to sink deeper and ramify over larger areas in search of food and moisture, which is the surest protection against drought. During seasons of wet weather the excess of water passes more readily from around the roots and they are not so liable to be drowned. In case of the shallower phase of the type, some difficulty has been experienced in plowing deep, as a result of the turning plow failing to "scour" in the strainer subsoil. It is recommended under these circumstances that the revolving disk plow be used instead of the regular turning plow. The two-horse, steel-beam turning plow is probably better suited for use on the deeper, sandier phases of the type, although the disk plow can be used to advantage.

THE CLIPPER'S REPLY TO ADVERTISER'S CRITICISMS.

The Advertiser Defends Gov. O'Neal For High Tax Raises. Says Clipper Is Ignorant of Law.

put in others, although he might for amending this law so as to not have any cause for so doing. Can the Advertiser defend such a law as this, which vests in one man, whether it be Mr. O'Neal or some other man, the power to control tax matters in Alabama? It is true that tax raises are made by the state commission through the county tax commissioners, appointed by them and the governor, but the law places in the hands of the governor the power and authority to carry out his own desire or wishes or whims in the matter of raising taxes.

This is the one, man system which The Clipper opposes, and we believe The Advertiser agrees with The Clipper in this position.

But The Advertiser falls down and signally fails to establish its assertion or prove its charge. It might be expected that The Advertiser would go further and show wherein the Clipper was wrong or mistaken about the tax laws of Alabama and in what way. The Clipper had committed an error in stating the facts. But The Advertiser fails to inform us differently as to the law, and finally admits the truthfulness of the facts in the case.

The Clipper does not arrogate unto itself any extraordinary knowledge of the laws of the state, neither does it plead any great ignorance of these laws, but it desires to reiterate what it has already said about these tax laws and to call The Advertiser's attention to some provisions in them which it has seemed to ignore.

The Clipper repeats its statement that The Advertiser seems to be in doubt as to whether The Clipper's ignorance of the tax laws of Alabama is genuine or simply feigned ignorance. It charges The Clipper with ignorance of some kind at least.

The next statement of The Advertiser is as follows:

"The Clipper, in a fine frenzy of patriotism, declares: 'The taxing power of Alabama is virtually in the hands of one man, the Governor of Alabama. We do not subscribe to this kind of government.'

The Clipper knows better than that. It certainly knows that Alabama has, on its statute books a general revenue act. It knows that the Governor and the members of the State Tax Commission are sworn to uphold this law. The Clipper, however, states that the taxation system of Alabama is plainly defined in the statute books of Alabama, and it knows that the Governor is under oath to see that the laws, which he can neither change nor amend, shall be faithfully executed."

In this statement it is noticeable that The Advertiser declares that The Clipper is not really ignorant, and that it knows better.

It says that The Clipper "should attack and ask for its repeal," does not give the governor the power to remove the members of the State Tax Commission without cause, if so desired. Let The Advertiser read section 89 E of the revenue law, page 188, Gen. Act of Legislature of 1911, which reads as follows:

"The governor may at any time, with or without cause, remove the chairman, and associate members of the State Tax Commission from office, or any of them, and fill any vacancies caused by such removals."

The Clipper does not know any provision like this in any law passed by any other legislature of Alabama and approved by any other governor of the state.

The State Tax Commission law of 1907, which The Advertiser admits is not a good law, and which gives The Clipper "a chance to attack and ask for its repeal," does not give the governor the power to remove the members of the State Tax Commission without cause, if so desired. The Clipper, however, states that the state's tax laws are virtually placed in the hands of one man, the governor.

The Clipper, however, states that the state's tax laws are virtually placed in the hands of one man, the governor.

The Advertiser attempts to defend Gov. O'Neal by placing the blame for this State Tax Commission on Ex-Governor Comer. The Advertiser said it opposed the passage of this law in 1907, but now it is law, and Gov. O'Neal must enforce it.

The Advertiser is inconsistent when it condemns Comer and at the same time defends O'Neal in this matter. It forgets that Governor O'Neal and his legislature must severally for the enactment of fact, which The Advertiser must admit, Governor O'Neal sent a letter of instructions to the State Tax Commission to raise taxes in Alabama, and they are obeying his orders. If they should refuse to carry out the governor's instruction, he would probably fire them, but he does not criticize Gov. O'Neal for his failure to have his law repealed, and it criticizes Gov. O'Neal severely for the enactment of this law which it says should be repealed.

The Clipper admits that the Governor is charged against the Clipper. It says the facts stated, by The Clipper are ingeniously "juggled," a slight of hand trick of The Clipper, a deceptive statement of the real facts.

The Clipper thanks The Advertiser for its most courteous manner of expressing what it really intends to say. The Clipper is the prohibition law. Would The Clipper argue that the prohibition law should be enforced to the letter, but that the tax laws of Alabama should be "suspended?" The Clipper could not imagine any other law than another State Tax Commission, unless the new officials flagrantly and openly violated the law. The Clipper should attack the law and ask its repeal. In this way only can conditions be remedied. And when The Clipper assumes this ground, it moves up to the position taken by The Advertiser when the present State Tax Commission act was before the Legislature."

The Advertiser answers the following:

1. Does it approve the present State Tax Commission law as amended by the 1911 Legislature and approved by Gov. O'Neal?

2. Was there not an effort made at the last legislature to abolish the State Tax Commission, and did not Gov. O'Neal bitterly oppose this proposed law?

3. Did not Gov. O'Neal oppose the proposed abolition of the County Tax Commission law?

4. Did he not favor the keeping of the county tax commissioners with their power to raise taxes in Alabama?

5. Did not J. Lee Long strongly advocate the abolition of the county tax commission office, and is not the fact that Gov. O'Neal and his friends disagreed with Mr. Long and fought for keeping these county tax commissioners to raise taxes?

6. Who prepared the present revenue law of Alabama including these State Tax Commission provisions?

7. Did Gov. O'Neal ever recommend the repeal of this state tax commission law?

The Clipper desires information from the Advertiser in regard to these matters. Let it explain what Gov. O'Neal had to do with these laws, and then we may see whether or not the Advertiser is correct in its statement when it says Gov. O'Neal is "Only Enforcing the Law."

A Serious Accident.

Mr. John W. Scoggins happened to a serious accident Tuesday. He was accidentally discharged and struck his left arm just above the hand and lacerated the arm so badly that physicians had to amputate his hand. The Clipper regrets Bro. Scoggins misfortune.

Praising the South.

Almost every day newspapers of the country have something nice to say about the south and it makes us feel happy to know our neighbors are taking so much interest in us.

One of the neatest things said about this section recently comes from the Omaha Bee. It is as follows:

The South's growth is remarkable, and the West, as well as the East, rejoices, because the south's development was greatly needed by the country as a whole. Its resources and energies lay dormant too long as it was. The fertility of its soil, its mineral products, its mills and factories, all were needed, and their development is a national boon. The South's attention to intensive farming, which has been spoken of, is one matter in which the West feels especially concerned, for the West rather prides itself on pioneering, somewhat in this great movement, and if its example has caught other sections, so much the better. There can be no unfriendly rivalry in these two sections.
One profits by the other's progress, or would lose by its loss.—Montgomery Journal'

The institute will continue one week.

Mother.

The name is a word to conjure with, to call up scenes and incients that have made the deepest and holiest impressions upon our hearts. Associated with the impressionable age of childhood, there are few incidents in the early part in which mother is not the central figure, the presiding genius, and with many she has continued to hold this enviable position throughout life. Forming our plastic minds, ministering to the wants of our growing bodies, comforting here and encouraging there, forgetful of self and having at heart the welfare of her little family, she has spent the best years of her life cultivating a crop, the harvest of which we are able to make her joy and delight or the sorrow and disappointment of her late years. If the latter, we have in a serious way failed in our duty in recognizing our privileges.

As the autumn of life comes on mother is more sensitive to kindness and attentions, also to the lack of these manifestations of our love. Her hold on life and its interests are weakening, and little by little as her hands forget their cunning and her feet refuse to take the well-worn paths, she is resigning her labors and cares. This gives her more time for thinking and remembering, and as the hours seem longer, she is more given to introspection.
If not given the best of care and loving attention at this time, she may begin to feel that she is useless, and even that she is in the way—one of the greatest trials that can come to the mothers of men. If, after life of toil and sacrifice for the sake of her children, she finds that they no longer need her nor cherish her, she may feel that ingratitude is one of the harshest defects to be found in the heart of a child. In many cases that which has caused her to suffer has been mere thoughtless-ness on the part of a son or daughter, but, mark! the day will come when that thoughtlessness will be a rankling thorn in the flesh; so guard against it, make her happy and lay up future happiness for yourself, for it will be the things that you have not forgotten that will comfort you when she is gone.

A man or woman who never drifts very far from home and mother in thought and ideals will always have an anchor which is strong and enduring in the worst storms of life. With a firm faith in God, love and reverence for mother and a delight in the old home, a man has a shield against which the most trying circumstances cannot prevail.—Selected.
